“ To my baby brother, words can not express the pain we feel with you going home to be with our Heavenly Father. In your 25 years of living you, u had endured so much. We know God makes no mistakes but I can't lie we can't understand the why to this one. I watched you transform from a handsome young man to one of the most beautiful women that I have ever met. Paris, my sister, you taught me so much about loving myself and being true to who I am. Your memory will forever live on and not a day will pass where we aren't missing you. Until we meet again sis, We love you and continue to watch over us.

*Love Your Big Brother Rico and Big Sister Jazz!

I am unfortunately unable to attend the service but i did write something for paris:

*Just made it home about a week ago browsing on a fb feed and of course i see Some things i really didn't want to see Why was my sista just taken away from me Not just the lgb but most importantly taken away from friends and her family Didn't get the chance to be What is going on in our community would somebody please just speak up for me
If you think we mad now just wait and see What's done has been done but her family needs to rest at ease
So at least give us closure please
And to Paris I say babygirl rest in peace.*

*From the heart of
